How our advisers are paid

Advisers who are employed by Enva Advisory Pty Ltd are paid a fixed salary with the potential for a quarterly bonus based on a balanced score card. No payments are made to employees that are directly linked to any one client, product or product type or referral partner.

Advisers who are self-employed and authorised by us receive 80-100% of any fees or payments made by you after licensee, software and insurance costs.

Relationships with other companies

No preference or priority is given to any financial product or service provider.

We may in some circumstances receive invitations to corporate events or lunches to view product offerings. We may also receive support services such as access to software and or training.

It is our general practice to decline financial benefits of any value and for product providers to either withhold this payment or donate the proceeds to charity. However, should your adviser receive a non-cash benefit it must be limited to $300 in any 12-month period.

Referral Relationships

Where you have been referred to us by someone else, we may pay them a fee or some other benefit in relation to that referral. This payment could be up to 25% of any fee you pay.

Also, where we refer you to a partner to provide you with services we cannot provide, we, the licensee, may receive a fee, commission or some other benefit.

Advisers must comply with the FASEA (Financial Adviser Standards Authority) and are banned from receiving conflicted payments including payments from product providers where they provide you with financial advice on that product or strategy or payments from a referral partner providing you with an additional service (for example a property buyer's agent, accountant or general insurance broker),

Details of any referral fee or commission received or paid to the licensee will be set out in the advice document we provide to you or disclosed separately at the time of the referral.

Initial fees for new clients

Initial advice service

Financial product or service advice is a professional service provided by highly qualified professionals with strict requirements and obligations. The fees for our services reflect these high standards and the investment required by us to provide you with quality, personalized advice.

General advice	$330 per meeting
Initial Personal Advice – Lite	$3,300 advice and research + $500 advice implementation
Initial Personal advice – Standard	$5,800 advice and research + $700 advice implementation
Initial Personal advice – Complex	$7,500 advice and research + $1,250 advice implementation

All fees are inclusive of GST and are fixed once agreed. Life insurance commissions received may be used to offset your fixed fee and any advice relating to your superannuation may be debited from your superannuation account. These fees are a guide and depending on your circumstances, your adviser may determine an appropriate fee that differs from the above. Personal advice usually refers to advice for a “family unit” which includes both partners and their dependent children. Where circumstances between partners differ significantly your adviser may recommend a separate advice document and will adjust the fee accordingly.

You should prepare for each meeting by thinking about what areas of your affairs you would like to improve and questions you might have.

Typically, “Lite” clients will have a relatively simple set of circumstances or require advice scaled to specific area such as superannuation.

“Standard” clients have fairly common circumstances and require comprehensive advice covering areas including investment, retirement, wealth protection and estate planning

“Complex” clients may have more sophisticated arrangements such as trusts and SMSFs or unlisted private investments.

Annual fees for all clients

Annual review service

Our services work best for people who take an active interest in the management of their affairs and invest time to ensure they take full advantage of our services. Unlike other professions where no work is done without your direct request; our team may need to regularly review your asset allocation, investment selection and financial products. We are your first point of contact for changes or withdrawals and a very important and ongoing role in your life if you become disabled and need to rely on insurance products we have recommended.

Your adviser is not simply a method to buy financial products but a consistent partner you can communicate with regularly to ask questions, run ideas past or confide in.

To ensure our clients do not fear picking up the phone or dropping in to our office, we charge a fixed fee every 12 months based on the services you require. You may choose to pay for this service monthly or annually.

The term of any agreement will not exceed 12 months. This ensures that if we are unable to contact you or if you choose not to review your agreement, that you do not pay for a service you do not receive.

Service	Cost inc. GST

Adviser access and ongoing management	$1300 per year OR $110 per month
– Life

Adviser access and ongoing management	$2,000 per year OR $175 per month
– Standard

Adviser access and ongoing management	$4,000 per year OR $350 per month
– Complex

Note: a 5% surcharge applies to fees charged via superannuation accounts excluding those debited from SMSF cash accounts. Life insurance commissions received may be used to offset your fixed fee.

“Lite” clients will typically prefer straightforward products and use ongoing advice to ensure their strategy remains on track.

“Standard” clients will often have a tailored portfolio and utilise the services of our practice to make small changes or hold important records.

“Complex” clients seek a close working relationship with our team across multiple areas.

Terms and further considerations

Reasonable nature of fees:

Reasonable is defined by us to mean a fee that a qualified but disinterested adviser would agree has a strong prospect of placing you in a better position without causing obvious financial hardship.

As an example – a $3,300 fee to provide advice on a $15,000 investment. The research required would justify such a fee but the significant reduction in the invested capital would suggest to us that such a cost is not reasonable.

In this case the adviser may need to decline to provide advice.

In some years you may need very little advice and in others you will need to completely restructure your products or services. While our fee arrangements must be agreed to each year, we have calculated our pricing to smooth out the highs and lows.

In some years our advice to you will simply be to maintain your current products, in others it will be to change products, change your strategy and redirect some of your money.

This arrangement is limited or “scaled” to the area of advice you have asked us to manage.

If you needed further advice on a new area, for example an investment or insurance advice, then there may be an additional cost which you will be made aware of prior to any work being completed.

Terms and further considerations

Fixed fees vs other charging methods

We believe that your interests are best served by a fixed fee arrangement. This means that the cost of your service, once determined by your adviser, is fixed for a period of up to 12 months.

This view is based on research that suggests that hourly rate services cause fee anxiety which may result in you avoiding services you might need and may incentivize staff to take more time than is necessary to complete work on your behalf.

Asset based fees or fees based on a percentage of your assets have not been shown to improve the quality of advice, they may motivate advisers to recommend products that make it easier to calculate their fee which could be detrimental to you and are opaque when determining the fairness or value represented by the cost.

Years of experience in insurance advice and claims suggests that the service offer is so difficult to price and so unknown at the time of application that commissions represent the best way of being remunerated for this service currently. We are conscious of the fact that insurance commissions also ensure that advice in this area remains affordable and believe it is important for people still building their wealth to be able to access quality insurance advice. We accept and agree that insurance commissions are a conflict of interest and our business has put in place safeguards based on instructions provided by the Financial Adviser Standards and Ethics Authority.

Fees may be tax deductible

Advice related to the ongoing management of your investments may be tax deductible. You should seek tax advice from a qualified tax practitioner with respect to any potential deduction and should not rely upon this statement to lodge your own tax return.

Annual fees commence on the 1st of July each year.

Our service commences for all clients on the 1st of July each year and continues until the 30th of June in the following year. We will write to you in April of each year confirming the price for the following year.

You must then confirm via electronic or paper means that you intend to renew the service and nominate a payment method. If you choose not to renew your service by the 30th of June, you will no longer be entitled to the services offered and any payment arrangement will cease.

Timing of advice delivery:

We can provide you with a record or statement of advice and conduct a review at any time during the year when your adviser is available and at a time that suits you.

Payment Frequency:

You can choose to pay the fee annually or monthly.

Terms and further considerations

Payment Method:

You can pay the fee from your superannuation or investment product (when allowed by the product provider) or by direct debit or credit card.

For clients paying by superannuation or where we receive sufficient insurance commissions to waive fees, we may charge a $5 annual fee from your nominated non-superannuation account.

Renewal process:

You will receive an offer to renew your annual service after the 1st of April and before the 30th of June. You will need to confirm in writing either by electronic or paper means that you are aware of the proposed fees for the following year and reconfirm your payment method. You or your adviser can discuss your service arrangement and change it during this time to suit your needs.

Minimum charge:

You are free to cancel your personal advice service at any time. However, if you have received a personal review, we have likely incurred costs that exceed the months of service charged. For example, we complete your review in July and you wish to cancel our service in September. The maximum cancellation fee or "minimum charge" is 60% of the annual fee and only if you have received personal advice in that year. This amount can be paid upon cancellation or debited in line with your agreed payment arrangement until the outstanding fees are cleared. You will not be entitled to our services while making payments for a cancelled service with an outstanding fee. For clients who have paid annually, a pro-rata refund will be issued within 30 days.

Pro-rata credits, charges and cancellations:

If you become a new client or we undertake significant new work outside of your service arrangement you will pay a fee for service which includes the advice and implementation of your plan. To ensure your advice is implemented correctly we also offer a complimentary follow up meeting within 12 months of the initial advice.

A credit will be applied to your initial advice to consider the months before the July annual service start date so as to make sure you are not over charged.

For example, if you receive advice in May and pay $3,800, you would be charged in July a further $1,300 for the annual fee. In this case a credit of 10 months or $1,083 would be applied to your initial advice invoice.

If you choose not to proceed with an annual service or to terminate it within 6 months, we may need to recover all or some of the credit applied to your initial advice fee.

Terms and further considerations

Stopping and restarting an annual personal advice service:

There is no obligation to continue an annual fee service and you can renew this service at any time.

So long as your circumstances have not changed in a material way when you commence an annual advice service in the future you are free to start again at any time.

If however your circumstances have changed, it may no longer be appropriate to provide an annual advice service and you may need initial advice to ensure we provide services that comply with the law and that are in your best interests.

Important note on payment by superannuation:

Payment by superannuation is only appropriate if the advice relates to the management of your superannuation or retirement planning. Your adviser will provide guidance on how much - if any - of your annual fee can be deducted from your superannuation.

It is also important to note that payments from superannuation require additional administrative steps and carry the risk of follow on payments (where the product provider fails to stop a payment arrangement on time and we need to arrange a refund or credit to comply with the law).

For this reason, we charge an additional 5% fee for payments deducted from superannuation and a $5 fee payable from your non-superannuation cash account.

If we are unable to meet face to face or you choose not to meet with us, we will still provide you with advice on products and services we manage. You should meet with your adviser when you can and notify us of any changes to your circumstances so we can ensure our advice is appropriate.

What if I do not receive advice during the year?

Our agreement requires that your adviser provide you with written personal advice at least once during the service period and that you respond to requests for information so that our advice is in your best interests. The advice may be an email, letter, or document. If your adviser was unable to provide you with advice because they did not have enough information from you or because you chose not to respond to our requests, we will not offer to renew your service and may refund some or all of your fee paid for that year. If, however, we have failed to deliver this minimum service, you will be entitled to a full refund of that service fee.

It is important to note that we do offer "general advice" and other services which do not include a personal advice review. If you are paying for this service and choose to cancel it, a pro-rata refund will be issued for those who have made an annual payment.

What if I cannot meet my adviser for a review?
